Six Word Story Contest

Ernest Hemingway was once prodded to compose a complete story in six words. His answer, personally felt to be his best prose ever, was – “For sale: baby shoes, never used.”

Some people say it was to settle a bet. Others say it was a personal challenge directed at other famous authors.

Now, it's your turn to write a story in six words...

EXAMPLES

Willy Wonka is diabetic: no chocolate.

Sorry, honey. I'm stuck in traffic.

The man went to dinner alone.

He sold his mother-in-law on EBay.

Found: Wedding ring on bar stool.

Cursed with cancer, blessed with friends

Epitaph: He shouldn't have fed it.

The baby's blood type? Human, mostly.

Kirby had never eaten toes before.

Snack: Expand. Don't snack: Expand. Snack!
